

2022-2023 Qualified Allocation Plan: Public Comment Period Extended to July 22

The public comment period for the proposed changes to the 2022-2023 Qualified Allocation Plan (QAP) is being extended by three weeks to provide housing and community development partners additional time to review and comment on the proposed QAP changes. Please see below for the updated dates for engagement opportunities, including the public hearing and public comment deadline.

As Commissioner Ho expressed in her recent statement, “We continue to push for a large investment in housing bonds, and are adjusting our priorities so we can invest in housing preservation and production that serve people who make the least, who are disproportionately people of color.” The proposed QAP changes take steps with you as partners that develop multifamily rental housing that is affordable to help support equitable investment in multifamily housing development and to help increase housing stability for communities most impacted by housing disparities. Learn more about the proposed changes by reviewing the 2022-2023 QAP Summary of Proposed Changes and by sharing your ideas and feedback with us through the public comment process.
